10/12/2004	40	MEMORANDUM AND OPINION # 90757. The plaintiff unions seek a declaratory judgment that the Transit Authority's policies and practices relating to employee sick leave ("the Policy") violate the prohibited medical inquiries and examinations provision of the ADA, and request an injunction prohibiting the Policy's enforcement. The Transit Authority advances two justifications for the Policy: first, curbing sick leave abuse, and second, maintaining workplace and public safety. Although I recognize the importance of the public interests behind the Policy, I am bound to follow Conroy. Applying Conroy's analysis, I find that the first justification is sufficient to support the inquiries only with respect to those employees with egregiously poor attendance records, and the second is sufficient only with respect to employees with safety-sensitive jobs. Further factual development will be required to determine which employees are performing such safety-sensitive duties...Because it is not yet clear which groups may pose safety risks, the Policy may continue to be enforced until such time as that issue is determined.
